

It's a split-second decision, hit the gas or hit the brake pedal. You can run a light or get rear ended. Of course, if there is a traffic camera at the intersection speeding up might get you a ticket for speeding and running a red light. Which leads into the story titled . . .

The Light Turned Yellow

A fellow was driving down a busy street when the light turned yellow. He might have beaten the red light by accelerating through the intersection, but he did the right thing by stopping before the crosswalk.

A tailgating woman right behind him was furious, she honked her horn and screamed in frustration, as she missed her chance to get through the intersection, and in the process dropped her cell phone and makeup.

While she was still in mid-rant, she heard a tap on her window and looked up into the face of a profoundly serious police officer. The officer ordered her to exit her car with her hands up.

He took her to the police station where she was searched, fingerprinted, photographed, and placed in a holding cell.

After a couple of hours, a policeman approached the cell and opened the door. She was escorted back to the booking desk where the arresting officer was waiting with her personal effects.

He said, "I'm very sorry for this mistake. You see, I pulled up behind your car while you were blowing your horn, flipping off the guy in front of you and cussing a blue streak. I noticed the 'What Would Jesus Do' bumper sticker, the 'Choose Life' license plate holder, the 'Follow Me to Sunday-School' bumper sticker, and the chrome-plated Christian fish emblem on the trunk, so naturally I wrongly assumed you had stolen the car."
